

Figure 2. The number of measurement occasions (e.g., waves in a longitudinal study) is compared with the study time, across which these occasions must be distributed equidistantly to achieve constant statistical power to detect a variance of slope in a linear model.